Nomination for S-Cubed Executive Board 2013/14

I have no need to look back in order to review my experience with S-Cubed, since being a member of the exec team is, for me, a present experience which I live daily, and which has completely and drastically enhanced my university experience. I would not have become the person I am, nor would have I built the relationships and learned the skills that I have now, had I not decided to take an active role within our organisation.

Bearing this in mind, I feel that I should once again present my nomination to be part of S-Cubed's executive team. I think that my experience is a key asset, and I wish to continue contributing for the faculty's students' benefit.

In last year's letter, I wrote that:

"I wish to see the good work done by previous executive members continue to flourish and improve, and this is the main reason why I wish to be part of next year's team. There is always room for improvement, both in terms of quality as well as in terms of quantity. All of us would like educational, albeit co-curricular, activities such as seminars, site-visits, overseas experiences and talks, as well as social events such as parties, gatherings and out-door activities, to be frequent, cheap and relevant to each and every one of us."

I feel that the words which I wrote in April 2012 still apply for today. However, after one year of enthusiastic work within the executive, I can now say that I have a much better understanding of what S-Cubed activities and initiatives entail and the work they require, and so I can better judge the direction and level I wish S-Cubed will, and should, reach by the end of next year's term.

Another field in which I wished to contribute, and which ties in directly with S-Cubed's main aim of promoting unity among all students and potential students of science is through the setting up of sub-committees. In this regard, I can proudly say that S-Cubed has bounded in great leaps with the formation of five new sub-committees, four of which I had the privilege to chair (often in conjunction with other exec members). Throughout this year I have come to appreciate the work that such sub-committees can generate even more, and I am committed to strengthening their initiatives, as well as helping new ones to form and bear fruit, much further.

S-Cubed's motto is "strengthening your way forward". I give my word that I will do my utmost to continue, and build upon, the fantastic work that has already been done. Currently S-Cubed ranks amongst the first top four university student organisations, and this means that executive membership with S-Cubed carries with it a large degree of responsibility, of which (thanks to my experience with S-Cubed) I am fully aware.
